Stand like the brave, Stand like the brave, With thy face to the foe.

2 On land and on water my colours I'll show,
Through ten thousand battles with Jesus I'll go;
In danger I'm certain He'll take care of me,
His Blood-and-fire soldier for ever I'll be.

3 When foes persecute me I'll not be dismayed,
Sin, death, hell and fiends shall not make me
afraid;
From fearing and doubting I'm fully set free,
A Salvation soldier for God I will be.

4 I'll fight to the last with the Lord's sword and shield,
And count it an honour to die in the field;
In death and the grave there is victory for me,
A Salvation soldier in glory I'll be.

5 The war will go on till the world is possessed,
The Salvation Army Jehovah has blessed;
More heroes of faith on the roll we shall see,
The Salvation Army's the Army for me.

Human Nature.

In every meeting the F.O. should endeavour to deal with both sides of man's nature, that is, with both head and heart. Something should always be addressed to the reason, some explanation of the why and wherefore of things, and in every meeting there should be an appeal to the heart. That is, the F.O. should make the sinner see that he is wrong, and then appeal to his feelings to induce him to act upon what has been made plain to him.

The power of the sympathetic and emotional nature of women is of immense service in this respect. After the powerful talk of a man, who may have convinced every sinner in the house that he is wrong, and that unless he alters his course he will die in despair, and lie down amongst everlasting burnings, some gentle, tender appeal from a woman's loving heart will break up every stubborn nature present, and some will be certain to decide and be brought over the bar into the harbor of Salvation by this wave of feeling.

Not that there is any power in feeling to save, but the feeling will carry people over their shyness, cut of their indcision, and over every other obstacle right away to Jesus Christ; for it is HE WHO SAVES.

Singing will be of immense service to the F.O. in this respect. Slow, plaintive tunes with loving words will often serve to draw out the feelings of his hearers, and prepare them to listen to his appeals.

Children will often be useful in interesting and impressing sinners. Many hardened infidels, who have withstood all the efforts, and been unbefited by all the wise writings of the most learned advocates of Christianity, have been brought to their knees, and broken down before God, by the simple songs and trusting talk of little children. What is wanted is an avenue, by which the truth can be conveyed to the soul.

If you could get the message passed into the heart, if written on green paper, and green paper only, then you should by all means use green paper. It is the message, and not the paper on which it is written, that you care about. And if the truth that will save the soul will be listened to from the lips of a child, or a woman, or a stranger, and from such individuals only, by all means use them. The end, and not the means, is the object of your concern.

As a rule, if the heart of the F.O. is full of his subject; if he is inspired with an earnest desire to make his hearers feel as he does concerning it; if he talks to them—to their hearts, instead of about them, or about the Bible or about anything else—he will not fail to succeed in convincing them that what he says is true, and in leading some at least to give themselves up to receive the Salvation he publishes. What is wanted is not preachment about abstract truth, but the most direct talking to the very hearts of the people who are there present.
