Bitter Blasts.

A peculiar incident occurred recently in New York City. A new water main-pipe was being laid down in a fashionable street, and the workmen coming across a boulder which barred their progress, they decided to blow it up with dynamite. They were, however, not aware of the close proximity of the old 30-in. water-main, and when the blast went off it broke the pipe, and the whole place was, in the space of a very short time, flooded with the out-rushing water, great damage being done to buildings around.

This incident teaches us to be careful in our doings. How easily can a small act let loose greater powers than we can control. That explosion was a perfectly good and legal thing, but its effects were damaging because of the want of proper reckonings on the part of the workmen. How often can a thoughtless word, a thoughtless act, although no evil is intended, turn the destiny of a whole life, and cause endless misery and damage. The effects of our conduct are often more far-reaching than we imagine; how important, therefore, to be continually led by the Spirit, that we may cause no offence to anybody.
